What each tier compares

Blue: the agent gets only the binary and writes a Rust project. Green: the evaluator holds the references and runs the comparison.

The original binary decides each behavior result. Closed-source code structure has lower confidence, because no source exists.